FROM THE DIRECTOR'S DESK

Greetings to all,

Our success in life entirely depends on the support we receive from others. Likewise, in the work place we are dependent on each other to get our work done. One of the ways to win support of others is to ensure that we are emotionally stable and have good control over our emotions.

With all the stress and pressure in our life, it is easy to lose our cool at the slightest provocation. But keeping cool during crises, can save us years of pain and anguish. Hurtful words unleashed at the spur of the moment, even if, during a crisis, tend to alienate others. Words are like arrows: Once released they can't be retrieved. Before we respond to someone who has irritated us, it is better to ask ourselves whether our reply is truthful, kind and necessary. We should respond only if our proposed reply fulfills all the aforesaid three tests.

Uncontrolled anger is perhaps the most destructive emotion that people experience in the work place. It is also the emotion that most of us do not know how to handle. When we are able to recognize the signs of anger we can choose how to react and control our anger. Once we start getting angry, we should stop what we are doing and relax, breathe deeply, do vigorous exercise (as it stimulates feel-good brain chemicals) listen to music, count from 100 to 0.

Behave to others as you wish them to behave towards you.

May God Bless You All!!!!

Knocking at the door of Mr. Mohan Kumar (name changed) in the Nephro Room his wife gazed at me with a gloomy face. Understanding her facial expressions and body language, I consoled her with empathetic words. Interacting with her and patient I came to know that they were totally depressed with their current familial situation. Spending all the hard earned money for dialysis and medicines they were in the dark about continuous treatment. When I explained in detail about a government scheme, Karunya benevolent fund which provides financial assistance for those undergoing dialysis, they heaved a sigh of relief from their ongoing miserable condition. Even though, doctors and other medical professionals meet these patients on daily basis, they may not be able to understand a family's struggles and social background. Therefore, here comes the role of a medical social worker.

In yet another incident, while talking with a bystander in Neuromedicine ward, where his father was admitted with acute stroke, leading to a coma state, the bystander unraveled the truth, that patient skipped blood pressure medicine other day. Ignorance and lethargic attitude towards medicine intake was addressed and educating the patient and bystander was properly given.

Similarly, in the Urology ward patients who were admitted with kidney stones had been asked about their current life style, work habits and routine living. Most of them did not have proper drinking water habit during their hectic work. Patients were made aware of need to drink more water and how to avoid future growth of kidney stones. Therefore, it's another role of a medical social worker to educate a patient about their illness.

Furthermore, during my visit to patients in Neuro-Surgery ward, many patients who underwent spinal cord surgeries were seen bedridden condition. They need to have long time of rest and continuous treatment. Therefore, I contacted our own palliative care team regarding their possibility of future assistance at home. Even, some patients with poor financial background were referred for some monetary needs to meet their treatment expenses. Here arises role of a medical social worker in referral services.

Again, in the department of gastroenterology patients affected with liver cirrhosis were counseled and the root cause of alcohol addiction emanating from some familial issues or social circumstances. A medical social worker can create drastic changes in such patients' lives by counseling patients, family members and others then demotivating them from alcohol intake further.

Likewise, visiting the pediatric ward many parents have requested for their children to be engaged with some toys and play materials. Understanding its importance it was informed to the concerned authorities and within a short span pediatric department was made available with such items. It is the role of a medical social worker to work as a facilitator for the improvement of a department.

It is also to be noted, that through the grievance redressal and other interventions Medical Social Workers play a vital role in social and administrative policy making.

Good morning..... I am medical social worker What..? Social worker.....? What do you do....?

It's the usual question aired by the patients, grassroot level of cleaning staff to the top most doctors. Anyway, I hope at least in Lisie hospital, now onwards no one would ask this question again Health care professionals are yet to come in to terms with real requisite and role of a social worker in hospital settings. Of course, no one is to blame for In the Indian context, significance of professional social workers, that's too in hospitals had not been ever heard of till recently. But now, Medical Council of India, NABH and other health care professional bodies have made it mandatory to appoint certain number of social workers in hospitals, to cater the needs of patients in improving and addressing their grievances in a time bound manner. Although professional social workers have a topmost significance in western countries, whereas our country's healthcare system yet to utilize services of Medical Social Workers and making them part of multidisciplinary team in a hospital setting.
